I think it is because the reporter has a deadline of 10/7 when he contacted us unless he will have a followup article. Thanks -- Medi

All,

The article is already online, so I don't know if that is the end of this particular media inquiry.

Medi,

Is DTSC writing a response to this inquiry, or are you asking the Navy for input?

The Navy also received a media inquiry from the same media person, although it was just about the rad program.

Thanks,
Jim

Sandy,

I passed along your request to the current DTSC project manager. I'll be working with her and we'll try to have responses back to you by tomorrow (late) PM.

Ryan,

Jeanne Garcia suggested I contact you about this inquiry...Did you handle it previously or do you still handle it? The stuff I saw in Envirostor did not refer to the sites that are mentioned.

Please get back to me as I need to get the answers before his Thursday deadline.

Many thanks!

Sandy

Sandy,

Here's what I'd like to know about contamination at the old Navy base at Treasure Island:

1. How serious is radiologic contamination at the Treasure Island base?
2. Is such contamination limited to Site 12 and Building 233, or does it lie elsewhere on the base?
3. What does DTSC think of the navy's efforts to "address" the contamination?
4. What does DTSC think of the work done by contractors like Shaw and Tetrattech (and any others working on base clean-up).
5. Are there toxics on the base worse than the radiological contaminants?
6. If so, what are they, where, and how are they being addressed?

Thanks very much for your time and attention.
